Seven Mile Market would like to thank all the customers who reached out to provide us with words of support and encouragement for our new membership policy that was announced yesterday. We also thank the close to 2,000 people who have already signed up for new membership. Unfortunately, we need to notify the public that we have placed this program on hold.

It has become clear to us in the last 24 hours that this program, which was exclusively meant as a security measure to benefit our customers and employees, was misconstrued to have other motives. There can be nothing further from the truth. Our employees and customers (including our professional Instacart shoppers) hail from all walks of life, and we welcome and very much appreciate each and every one. However, after consulting with legal counsel it has become clear to us that running such a program in the society we live in would be a legal risk too much for us to bear. We will continue to search for ways to enhance the safety of our store, either by bringing this program back in a different format or by implementing other measures.

We thank again the many loyal supporters of Seven Mile Market, and we look forward to serving the community for many years to come.
